FOR DELEGATE TO CONGRESS

JAMES COLLINS

OF IOWA COUNTY.

Mr. Collins' Lecture.

We were pleased to see that our predictions with regard to the attendance of our citizens upon Mr. Collins' lectures were fully verified on the evening of Tuesday last; and although the audience was not so large as might be wished, still there was a goodly number in attendance, and we now venture the prediction, that to-morrow evening will see the lecture filled to overflowing. We have had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Collins preach, and we also listened to his lecture on Protestantism, and consequently we had no fears individually as to the result; but as many at this lecture listened to Mr. G. for the first time, we felt anxious lest he should not come up to his previous efforts, and that many of our personal friends, whom we had persuaded to attend, might be disappointed. That they were disappointed—most decidedly and most agreeably disappointed—let them, and let every individual who was present bear testimony. He not only realized our expectations, but greatly exceeded them, and far transcended any of his former efforts in this place.

His lecture was not, as we at first expected, an historical account of Ireland under English domination, but merely the "Spirit of Irish history" during that time; and the countenances of every one of his hearers sufficiently evinced that the subject of which he spoke was exceedingly interesting, and one which awakened the warmest sympathies of every friend to poor, trampled, down-trodden Ireland. His lecture embraced a period of over 700 years, and consequently he could make but passing allusions to the events that transpired, and the personages that figured during that time of time. As it was impossible to condense such a period of history into a single lecture, so it is impossible to convey in our brief remarks any adequate idea of the truly eloquent lecture of Mr. Collins.

Nevertheless we cannot fail to make some mention of a discourse so replete with information and with true eloquence. The lecture, instead of being a mere dry abstract of historical events, was a series of rapid glances at the most important epochs; written in the finest vein of philosophical epical; elaborated to the last point of artistic finish and completeness in style, and imbued with the very "Spirit of Irish history."

The age of Elizabeth was one of the most beautiful specimens of history grouping we ever heard or read. All the great geniuses, and eminent men who adorned that period, seemed as it were to rise from the grave of a past generation, and pass before us in long and glorious procession. Philosophy and poetry—statesman, warrior and divine—each so perfectly delineated that we knew the person before we heard the name. The description which he gave of the condition of Ireland after the revolution, in its gloomy grandeur and fearful distinctness, reminded us of the terrible picture of the ravages of the British army in the Carnatic which makes one of the most magnificent passages of Burke's celebrated speech at the impeachment of Warren Hastings.

We should be glad, had we time, to do more than merely allude to the passing touch of notice of the great souled Emmet—to the stirring sketch of Grattan, breathing the very soul of patriotism and liberty—to the masterly delineation of Curran, which was so vivid and life-like, that we almost shrank back and held our breath, as if that master spirit of eloquence was himself present pouring out the torrent of his fiery and withering invective upon some base informer or base hypocrite of power. But why particularize individual beauties in a lecture, which was a galaxy of beauties, and which in freshness and fullness—in philosophic power and graphic description, is hardly surpassed by any thing in the whole range of English literature.

The next lecture, we are told, is full of that genuine wit and rare humor which is so characteristic of the Irish, and we feel it would be superfluous to urge any of our citizens of cultivation or taste, to come to the rich intellectual banquet that will be set before them.

With regard to the lecture we have heard but one universal meed of praise, and it was indeed worthy of all the commendation that has been bestowed upon it. His language was so chaste and elegant, his periods were so beautifully rounded, his delivery so impressive, so truly and sublimely eloquent, that to praise it would be to paint the lily or to gild the red rose. Those who attended enjoyed a treat that they will long remember, and those who stand away know not what they lost.

Those who were present will certainly attend the remainder of the course, and upon those who were absent, we would especially engage the importance going to the Union church to-morrow night, and if they do not come away fully satisfied that they have received a quid pro quo, then we hereby pledge ourselves personally and individually to refund to any and all such the price of his ticket. At the conclusion of the lecture, it was announced that the next lecture would be delivered on Friday (to-morrow) evening, and that to those who purchased tickets for the remainder of the course, the price of one lecture would be deducted.

"The nigger paper" published at "odd spots" at Prairieville, affects a witty saucer at our remarks respecting the response every where given to the nomination of Col. Collins. This paper is the miserable, drivelling concern that is all the while whining and sniveling at the community for its lack of patronage. This concern it was, we believe, that published and endorsed the resolutions of an abolition meeting or convention held in that village, in which Mr. Clark was denounced for having defeated "Birney the Just!" This sheet, which on every one of its irregular and drawn-along paths of state abolition twaddle—this hebdomadical, half-penny, half-silly, half-stupid, half-palatable, is of itself a rare political curiosity. When such impostors mount the editorial tripod, common sense shrinks from a contact with the impostor.

California Text.—Capt. M. Ap. C. Gentry has taken possession of Monterey with the force under his command, as commander of a U. S. vessel of war, and Government pretended to be very indignant, and sent immediately to the Pacific to have that officer allied. Since which time the transaction has slumbered.

Whether our Government have furnished the blankets and musical instruments which the brave Captain promised the Mexican authorities on settlement or not, we are not informed; but certain it appears to be, that instead of a Court Martial, Mr. Jones is highly complimented for his conduct in taking the capital of California.

It was a part of the game, however, though it was happened, it was a premature play. The following appears as the official endorsement of the affair by our Government.

Navy Department.
March 1, 1845.
"Sir:—The President has authorized me to say to you, that in those circumstances of your conduct while in command of the Pacific Squadron, which induced your recall, an explanation he perceives evidences of an ardent zeal in the service of your country, and a devotion to what he deemed to be your duty regardless of personal consequences, which entitle you to anything but censure from your government. Ample atonement having been made to Mexico for your acts complained of, there has been no disposition to visit you with punishment of any description for conduct actuated by such elevated principles of duty. Of this you were apprized immediately after your return.

The department has been and still is, anxious to give you employment; in this the President concurs; and it will give him the greatest pleasure to see you speedily placed in a situation corresponding with your rank and merits.

I am respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
J. Y. MASON, Sec'y of Navy.
Com. Thos. Ap. C. Jones,
U. S. Navy, Washington."

National Steamships.—We are glad to learn that the government are determined to increase the number of steamships in our navy, so far as its means will permit. Vessels like the Princeton or Mississippi are much wanted, especially at this juncture.

The United States frigate, Constitution, the gallant ship which won the first laurels for our infant navy in 1799 and 1800 under Commodore Truxton, is to be metamorphosed into a steamer. Orders have been received by Commodore Wilkinson, in command of the Gosport Navy Yard, to proceed immediately to make the necessary alterations for that purpose, and all hands at the Navy Yard were busily employed yesterday, in landing her taken into the dock, for which she will be ready to-day. Thirty feet is to be added to her length, (which will then be 200 feet), and she will take on board the great Sixton gun which is now carried by the Princeton, and also the one which has been manufactured in England, to the order of the new Navy Department. The Princeton, it is ascertained, is too small to carry, without detriment, either of these enormous engines of destruction. The Constitution, we believe, was built at Baltimore, and was universally acknowledged to be the most beautiful and perfect ship of her class in the world.

Learning Extraordinary.—Galignani's Paris Messenger states that recently a gentleman took into the diligence between Marseilles and Toulon, a vessel of leeches which were not well secured at the top. The creatures soon sallied forth in quest of blood. Suddenly piercing cries were heard from a young lady who, unaware of the bloodthirsty passengers which had been placed in the carriage, declared that she was seized with acute pains as if punctured with lances. Though she continued her cries, delicacy prevented her from permitting any of the passengers to ascertain the cause of her uneasiness. A detachment of the leeches, however, had gone further to fare worse, for they had fixed on the legs of a stout elderly gentleman who less fastidious than the fair one, at once uncovered and ascertained the cause. The diligence was stopped, and the young lady taken to the nearest house, where she was relieved from her unpleasant companions. Between fifteen and twenty of the voracious leeches had made their way up and fastened upon her.

Mechanics Among the Ancients.—The foreign correspondent of the Savannah Republican gives the following interesting information concerning the means used at Pompeii for supplying that ill-fated city with water:

"The town of Pompeii was supplied with water by means of pipes of iron, lead, and of baked clay. The museum contains a bronze cock of large size, which has two communicating pipes. The water plashing which has been so long hermetically sealed there, can now be heard in it."

Redemption of the Safety Fund Notes.—Since the passage of the law of the last Session, providing for the redemption of the outstanding notes of insolvent Safety Fund Banks, the following sums have been redeemed by the Comptroller, viz:

Commercial Bank of Buffalo,	$18,791
Bank of Lyons,	11,158
Commercial Bank of Oswego,	10,553
Clinton County Bank,	4,320
Watervliet Bank,	3,230
Bank of Buffalo,	692
Commercial Bank of New York,	447
Wayne County Bank,	76
City Bank of Buffalo,	35
